His personal estate, she estimates, is worth not more than $20,000. The value of his real property was not stated, although Harris was reputed to be worth $150,000 at the time of his death.

Mrs. Harris was accompanied by her bondsmen, Thomas Berry and William Beeston, each of whom qualified in the sum of $40,000. Mr. Harris left four children, two sons over the age of twenty-yone and two daughters under the age of fourteen years.

Harris accumulated his fortune in the manufacture of leathering coverings for bottles. His factory was located at Hope and Keap streets, Williamsburg, and he lived with his family at 75 Conselyes street.

On the night of Aug. 15 he went to the Revere House with an elegantly attired woman of fifty-five, and registered as James Morley and wife.

At 10 o'clock he was selxed with apoplexy, and at 3 o'clock the following morning he had a second stroke and died before a doctor could be summoned.

After the funeral a story was set affont to the effect that a member of Harris's family had found a will, by which the leather merchant left a large part of his estate to the woman who was with him when he died. The family refused to confirm or deny the rumor, but Mrs. Harris's statements in the petition fiatly contradicted the rumors.

Mrs. Harris's application was granted.

FIREBUGS AT PLEASANT PLAINS

Effort to Burn a School-House on Account of a District Quarrel.

Incendiaries, it is believed, are attempting to burn the school house at Pleasant Plains, S. I. The fire was discovered late last evening by E. M. Levinson and J. O. Androvette. The fiames were just then bursting through the roof. The village church bell was rung and the residents turned out in force, formed buckets brigades, and the fire, but not until the building had been damased to the extent of $2.00.

Investigation showed that the fire was of incendiary origin. The woodwork in one corner of the first floor was saturated with kerosene oil, and a quantity of inflammable material had apparently been placed there before the fire had been started.

The attempt to destroy the building is flames were just then bursting through Rich, a florist, of Steinway, L. I.

The three prisoners are employed by Frank Van Corperil, drove over to gether with Van Corperil, drove over to gether with Van Corperil, drove over to dered a lot of flowers and plants, which were loaded into his wagon. He then began to dicker with Rich about the price.

While he was arguing with Rich his three employees, who were in the wagon, whipped up the horse and drove away, Rich tried to stop them, but Van Corperil interferred.

The attempt to destroy the building is believed to be the result of a contest in the district. The old structure, a two-story frame building, has been outgrown, and the crection of a new building has been proposed. At the recent school meeting some of the voters advocated the enlargement of the present building in a different location. The district was about evenly divided upon the question, which was not disposed of. Considerable feeling has arisen in the district over the fire had the Morgue and a photograph was recognized instantly.

Mrs. Peet, who was only nineteen years old, was the wife of a laborer. Her father is Wallace Knapp, of Stony Point. He is a prosperous farmer, and his daughter was a belie of the place. She fell in love with a poor laborer named Peet, and after a short courtship they were married.

Three weeks ago the young couple came to this city, and were said to have begun house-keeping on Manhattan street. That was the last heard of his daughter by Mr. Knapp until he read of her mysterious death in the newspapers.

The remains, now in Potter's Field, will be disinterred and taken to Rock-t land County for final interment. Peet's whereabouts is unknown.

RUMOR ABOUT STEAMBOAT LINE

New Bedford Steamers Said to Have

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Sept. 1.—
The freight steamers plying for forty or fifty years between here and New York are to be discontinued, for a while at least, owing, it is claimed, to the leasing by another steamboat company of their New York pier, which the Old Colony Company must vacate by Sept. 1.—
It is said another pier has been secured, and business will be resumed in about four weeks. Some assert that this
